

AHCI Returns to IJT's Concurrent Watch Show TWF Witness World-Class Timepieces and Meet Distinguished Watchmakers!

A group of the world's leading independent watchmakers from the illustrious AHCI participated in Tokyo International Watch Fair (TWF) last year, creating great excitement and stir in the venue with their exceptional timepieces. AHCI members will return once more guaranteeing to cause another sensation among industry professionals and watch collectors at Japan's only international watch show.

About AHCI

AHCI, an acronym for Academie Horlogere des Createurs Independants, or the Horology Academy of Independent Watchmakers, consists of 32 of the world's greatest and most passionate watchmakers with solid knowhow of classical watchmaking, dedicated to creating exceptional timepieces.

Participating Watchmakers in 2010

Thomas Prescher (Switzerland)

He is a leading independent producer of complicated watches and a specialist tourbillon maker who creates complicated timepieces with exceptional designs.

Aniceto Pita (Spain)

He specializes in developing new mechanical systems to obtain unseen functionalities while adding his stylish Mediterranean character to his timepieces.

Svend Andersen (Switzerland)

As "the Watchmaker of the impossible", he surprises the world with amazing creations and inventions, including the most animated horological automaton ever made, and the first wristwatch with a secular perpetual calendar programmed for 400 years - or even 800.

Frank Jutzi (Switzerland)

His pendulum-clocks captivate through their plain forms. Until now some pendulum-clocks with 2 month-skeleton constructed movements were created, as well as different table clocks and wristwatches.

<About TWF>

As Japan's only international watch trade show, Tokyo International Watch Fair (TWF) will return for its 2nd year, expanding its scale by 20%, and gathering a wide range of watches and related products from around the world under one roof.

<Concurrent show: IJT>

International Jewellery Tokyo (IJT) is Japan's largest jewellery tradeshow, welcoming 1,350 exhibitors from 35 countries. Organised by Reed Exhibitions Japan Ltd. and Japan Jewellery Association (JJA), IJT and its concurrent watch show attracted 37,936 visitors from all over the world last year. This is the leading venue to see a vast variety of products at wide price points and source for high quality and innovative products.
